Film Sheikh's Former Mate Announces Her Engagement to Spanish Marquis

Los Angeles, June 6.—Rodolph Valentino's long fight to make his first wife, Jean Ackers, motion picture actress, cease calling herself Mrs. Valentino, suddenly bids fair to be successful.

Jean Ackers, just returned from the East, today announced her engagement to Don Marquis Luis de Buzan y Sandoval of Spain, when he was in New York.

If the actress remains in the movies after marrying the Spanish nobleman, she will undoubtedly suffer her new name for professional purposes.

The title Marquise de Buzan y Sandoval might be even more impressive on the screen than the celebrated one of Valentino.

The first to plead was Harold H. Hodekimon of Allston, who was fined thirty-four miles an hour on a Jamaway when Traffic Officer Bell stopped him. He was fined $10 and the suspension of his license recommended to the Registry of Motor Vehicles.

He protested the latter part of the sentence, but Judge Palmer said: "I am acting in the interest of humanity. I shall take this course with all offenders. It is one from which there is, fortunately, no delaying appeal." Whereupon twenty-nine other defendants looked grave.

Swelter! and Live Long! June Best, February Worst!

Cheer up! That is good for you. Dr. M. Victor Safford of the Boston Health Department and Dr. Bernard W. Carey of the State Health Department, two noted epidemiologists, say that the month of June is the healthiest in the whole year, and that, while excessive heat may be uncomfortable, it is not dangerous like excessive cold.

June is the month of health. February is the month of sickness and death. "We are making progress in the battle against diseases of the digestive tract, diarrhoea, cholera, typhoid and kindred diseases, while we are almost at a standstill in the matter of diseases of the nose, throat and lungs," said Dr. Safford. "Consumption, lung cancer and all of the forms of disease popularly known as 'cancer' cause trouble and the most baffled us."

ed that the light rain this afternoon is a harbinger of heavy thunder storms, accompanied by lightning which will sweep Boston tonight.

Factories in various parts of the metropolitan area reported depleted personnel due to employees being unable to withstand the weather.

While the local weather bureau predicted relief by nightfall from thunder showers, accompanied by lightning sweeping toward the city from North and Western New England, the Washington bureau issued a bulletin to the effect there is "no hope for a pronounced break."

The temperature at noon was 55, six degrees lower than yesterday, but the humidity was higher, increasing discomfort.

DEATHS ON THE GAS.

Craved by her inability to get relief, Mrs. Anna Minnie, forty-six years old, went in the kitchen of her apartment, at No. 25 Northampton street and turned open the gas of her gas range.

Purses sleeping under the door at the attention of Salvatore A. Grosso, a tenant of the building, who forced the door and found the unconscious woman on the street. She is reported dying at City Hospital.

A man known as Henry Kneeland, of unknown address, collapsed on Chambers street, West End, shortly before noon. Passers took him to Massachusetts General Hospital, where physicians declared him a victim of the weather. His condition is serious.

The first death of the year from the heat in New England was recorded today, when Medical Examiner William J. Clark of Milford declared Joseph Taylor, seventy-seven years old, a victim of sunstroke. The body was found on a ledge of the house, where he lived.

ONE DEAD, 12 STRICKEN.

Thus far the toll of the hot wave is one dead, twelve prostrated, in greater Boston, and one driven crazy.

Boston was the hottest place in the United States at 5 o'clock today, when the thermometer registered 82.

The heat wave has been broken in various parts of New England. Terrible thunder and lightning storms struck in the region round about Greenville, Vt., and spread eastward to Eastport, Me., and Portland, Me. Heavy rain was also reported sweeping east from Albany over the Berkshires.

Weather records were broken in half a dozen New England cities. This was one of the few times in the history of the local weather bureau that the Boston temperature has exceeded that of New Orleans and Galveston, Texas.

The thermometers in both cities recorded 89 degrees while it was 82 here. It was 78 at Key West at the same time.

While the weather bureau gauges stood at 84 at 11 o'clock, it was actually hotter on the downtown streets, from three to five degrees, according to thermometers at various outdoor stores. A peak

Only Fifty Boston School Teachers Marry in Year

Boston school teachers rarely fall victims to Cupid.

There isn't a single June bride this year among the whole 3,500 of them.

And during the last year only fifty of them have entered the bonds of matrimony.

It was reported from Newspaper Editor Boston Common, Franklin Field, the Fenway and other open places were covered with persons seeking out last night.

Fires in different parts of Boston gave relief to children by playing hose lines on them as they frolicked in bathing suits. The frog pond on the Common was the Mecca of hundreds of youngsters from the West and North Ends.

According to reports compiled by the United States Census Bureau in 71 cities with a population of 25,000,000 the death rate between June 1 and October 1 is lower than during the rest of the year.

The blizzard which raged from March 4 to 8 exacted a toll of one life and twenty persons were over- come, several of whom were at deaths' door for weeks after.

Federal statistics show the death rate in summer is about 10 per cent less than in 1922. The amount of sickness decreased almost as much.

Between 1918 and 1921, census reports reveal, the infant mortality rate in the 71 cities fell from 99.55 to 74.67, while the mortality rate from digestive diseases dropped from 10.47 to 10.17.

BLOOMING EDUCATED.

The reasons assigned by health experts is that flies are not as great a menace as formerly, that drinking water is purer, thereby reducing danger from typhoid to minimum, that diarrhoea in babies is no longer accepted as a matter of course and general public has become educated to following simple health rules in the hot months especially as regards eating.

Dr. Francis N. Mahoney, Boston health commissioner, declares that a city's health is better in hot summer weather than in intense cold. Dr. Mahoney said:

"The heat cannot be blamed for more deaths than the cold weather. It is simply a question of the condition that the people live under. In a big city in the Winter time families live more crowded together. It is natural to assume that through these crowded conditions in death, resulting in death.

CONDITIONS BETTER.

"But in the Summer months it is different. Conditions are more healthy. People of a city are not under the same living conditions. They get out into the open air, which, of course, makes their healthier."

"Just follow the rules of health for summer and you'll feel better and be in better health than in Winter. Dress lightly, bathe often, eat sparingly and be sure to abstain and refrain from indulging in any of the dangerous beverages which now appear to be available. And above all, don't forget to drink plenty of water."

Nine persons were overcome by heat in New York city, general in the East. More than sixty persons were sent to hospitals in Washington today broke the back of the heat wave in Detroit.

Heat Is Good for You, So Be Cheerful

Dr. Carey said: "Epidemics of diseases of the respiratory organs are fostered in the Winter by the huddling together of humanity in warm rooms, halls, schools, etcetera. Epidemics of children's diseases are more terrible in Winter because of their close contact in schools and other public places. In the Summer children play in the open, and the contact is not so close. Summer is the period of good health."

Dr. Carey's stable showing the number of deaths and reported cases of epidemic diseases in the months of February and June throughout the State follows:

Year	February	Deaths	June	Sick	Deaths
1922	12,554	1,077	6,753	487
1921	12,554	1,077	6,753	487
1920	12,554	1,077	6,753	487
1919	11,596	1,567	5,688	612

On the past thirty years the hot weather death rate has fallen off one-half. Healthy water supplies, pasteurized milk, the daily house fly—this kills more people in a month than all the corbals and lions and rattlesnakes in the world kill in a century—and better all round sanitation have cut down sickness and mortality in the Summer months 50 per cent.

The mortality statistics at City Hall bear out those at the State House. Taking 1922 as a typical year, it is shown by the City Hall figures that there were 1108 deaths from all causes in the city during the month of February, as compared with 752 in June.

WAKEFIELD MAN DROWNS TRYING TO SAVE BROTHER

'WIDOW' NOLEN, NOTED HARVARD TUTOR, DEAD

Thomas Whitling Nolen, affectionately known to thousands of undergraduates and alumni of Harvard as "Widow" Nolen, is dead, and is mourned today by a multitude of Harvard graduates, who eagerly acknowledge that they owe their degree to his tuition.

"Widow" Nolen has been a prominent figure at Harvard for thirty-five years, although never officially connected with the faculty. He began tutoring men who were behind in their classes in the late '80s of the last century, first in Master Hall and later in the Little Black. He became famous for his ability to cram students for exams, and his patronage increased enormously.

Nolen graduated from Harvard with the class of '94, with the degree of A.B., and later took advanced degrees in post-graduate courses. He has been 62 years old. His funeral will be at Christ Church, Cambridge, on Friday.

His wife, Mrs. Nolen, is the widow of Lord Mackenzie.

Witnesses said that she married a son of Lord Mackenzie, and that she divorced proceedings parted the daughter of Castilian nobility and the heir-apparent to the title and estate of Lord Mackenzie.

The annulment was uncontested. It was apparent that the whereabouts of Mrs. Frisbie was made unknown or concealed.

Porter said today, discussing the adoption of the Porter resolution by the League of Nations, that the American plan provides for curbing the production of opium to medicinal needs.

The League Commission voted to entirely the principle that opium production be limited.

"We came to Geneva with just one aim—that of securing international support to block the narcotics menace at the source," said Porter. "We were surprised to meet opposition from a group of nations who apparently placed financial and political considerations above a moral necessity. Our plan was not because we were wrong."

ONLY CONGRESS CAN FIX SHIP LIQUOR RULES

Washington, June 6.—Diplomats who have discussed the ship liquor question with State Department officials have been told pointedly that the question is purely one of American domestic jurisdiction and therefore not subject to treatment through any international conference.

The American government does not propose to ask such a method of adjustment or accept any proposal of that nature from an outside source. The question of rules and regulations under the Supreme Court's interpretation of the prohibition enforcement act is wholly a matter for Congress, it is held, and so far as known that viewpoint has not been challenged in the correspondence with various governments.

As indicated by Premier Baldwin in the British House of Commons recently, the point involved is one of comity among the nations. Application of the accepted principle of comity within American domestic jurisdiction, however, is regarded here as within the prerogative of Congress and not a matter for international conference agreements.

Whether the new commercial treaties soon to be concluded with many European countries will take up the ship liquor matter is not known. State Department officials refuse to discuss these matters further than to say that generally they will in shipping matters. Above all, Spain now being negotiated in Madrid, provisions of which are not made public.

GIRL SLAYS VICTIM

Robs Rich Chicagoan and His Wife Near Their Garage, Then Coolly Shoots Him

Chicago, June 6.—A tiny girl, who might easily pass for a popular debutante scarcely out of her teens, is being sought today as a brutal and murderous in one of the most extended police hunts in record in Chicago.

She shot and killed Edward C. Tennen, prominent and wealthy business man, after directing a male accomplice in a holdup of Tennen and his wife outside the garage at their home.

DRIVES CALMLY AWAY.
After firing the shot, the girl calmly drove away in her car, leaving Tennen's body in the street. The girl was seen to load her gun and drive away as calmly as if she were embarking on a moonlight ride with her favorite beau.

Two witnesses saw the abandoned machine was found near the scene. The slaying, characterized as without parallel in the annals of the city, was the first committed by a woman in Chicago.

Tennen was returning home with his wife after a short visit with his mother. The girl was seen to load her gun and drive away as calmly as if she were embarking on a moonlight ride with her favorite beau.

CROKER WIDOW SAYS HUSBAND BURNED WILL

Dublin June 6.—Mrs. Bula Croker, cross-examined during the contest of the will of her husband, the late Tammany chief, made one positive statement—that she had seen her husband burn the codicil of his will.

Under fire of cross-examination, every other statement was negative.

She denied having ever seen or heard of any persons until his name was linked with her own in recent public prints.

She denied she had ever made charges against Richard Croker, Jr.

In answer to questions intending to show she had influenced her husband against his children.

Mrs. Croker also denied she had destroyed a codicil to her husband's will. The supposed codicil, she said, was a trial will, which she saw her

ROB WORCESTER MAN OF $6,100 BY OLD GAME

Worcester, June 6.—Johnny Bouch of No. 215 Military street, posted security of $6,100 to help two "science-stricken" men return $27,000 of "science" money, and lost his money in the deal. The agency was the old "rod and white handkerchief" game.

The "science-stricken" men, according to the story Bouch told the police, approached Bouch and declared they wanted to find the owners of $27,000 stolen by their father.

FEARED ARREST

"Father didn't feel very well about it," Bouch said the men told him, "because he had stolen the money from poor people. He went to a priest, who told him to return the money."

"But father couldn't do that, and we can't either. If we do, we're sure to be arrested. Will you return the money for us?"

Bouch, after several conferences, agreed to assist. When the men had all been returned he was to receive a commission. Then he agreed to post a bond as evidence of good faith.

CASH LOCKED IN BOX.
From three banks where he had accounts, Bouch drew $6,100, which he placed in a red handkerchief. The strangers placed the $27,000 in a white handkerchief. Both handkerchiefs were placed in a box, which was locked, and given to him. The strangers promised to return the money when, and give him $3,000 in gold for his share of the transaction.

When the strangers did not return, Bouch opened the box and found the red and white handkerchiefs contained crumpled newspapers. Bouch has been unable to get the police a clear description of the men.

Unhappened test-takes with other men lasting until the early hours of the morning are the motives that prompted

Bernard P. Brennan, twenty-two, to sue for divorce from his wife, Catherine, he declared today. Previously Mrs. Brennan asserted that his reason for seeking a divorce was because she had thrown an alarm clock at him during an argument after she had shined his shoes for him for several months. "I could stand her throwing alarm clocks," Brennan said. "That was nothing. What caused me to go to court were her visits to a man living in the South End and her visits to a man in South Boston."

Million-Dollar Rum King Expose Turns Out to Be Fizzle

Fines totalling $3,500 were imposed upon James Costello, David Perlo and Alexander Goldberg, principals in the rum-running operations of the steamship Aventura, from Scotland, whose cargo has been estimated to have been worth a gross profit of $300,000.

Documentary evidence of a plot to smuggle 15,000 cases of Scotch whiskey into this country was said to have been found in a sensational raid on the Allston suite of Costello by agents of the United States customs service last March.

SENSATIONAL SURREIN

At that time the raid was headlined in the Boston newspapers, on statements of officials, as the first step in the uncovering of a million-dollar whiskey smuggling scheme and the bringing to stern justice of those who were the ringleaders and get-rich quick beneficiaries.

United States Assistant District Attorney Joseph V. Carroll was quoted as saying that the law in evidence alone would amount to hundreds of thousands of dollars; that it was believed the case involved the importation into this country of thousands of cases of whiskey, fine wines, brandies and champagnes, that prominent and wealthy persons were believed to be involved in the case to the extent of financing the importation of contraband liquor.

12,000 CASES CLAIMED.
According to Assistant U. S. Attorney Carroll, at that time, the rum running and smuggling began last summer, a member of the syndicate in this country crossing the ocean to longer to make arrangements with unlimited funds at his command.

The first step, according to Mr. Carroll then, was to contract with a famous Scotch distillery for an unlimited supply of booze. Then the steamer Aventura was chartered and specially outfitted for the work and on the initial voyage, the 12,000 cases were easily disposed of.

COSTELLO SURRENDERED.
Federal officials were referred to as saying they did not know how many cargoes of similar size had since been landed, but thought the international smugglers had made immense profits, as they realized $750,000 each trip.

Aventura's cargo was not sold to less than 250 case lots, each in advance, the officials are quoted as saying at the time of the arrest of Costello's wife, Perlo and Goldberg, himself later and paid the fine assessed against him by the court. Those are some of the features of the stories given out by the officials some weeks ago, which prepared the public mind for big court sensations.

NASHUA MAN WEDS HIS STEP-SISTER

Nashua, N. H., June 6.—When Mrs. J. Salvati was married to Ferdinand Bellevance, a little over a year ago, she and her daughter, Aurora, went to live with Mr. Bellevance and his family. An immediate friendship sprang up between Bellevance's sister, Albert, and his stepdaughter, Aurora, and as a culmination of this romance they were married at St. Francis Xavier Church.

JILTED BATHING GIRL SUES FOR $50,000 BALM

Syracuse, N. Y., June 6.—Jilted by Carl G. Nill, Watertown business man and former alderman, she says, after an arduous bathing beach courtship, thirty-year-old Maude L. Wright, attractive Syracuse divorcee, twenty years Nill's junior, today is suing for $50,000 balm for a broken heart.

Another woman, known to Miss Wright, she says, "replaced her in his affections after his open and successful conquest of her heart."

Miss Wright was permitted to resume her maiden name after divorcing Len Gilchrist, paragon at No. 111 East Ontario street, here, and went to Watertown three years ago.

Enormous photographs of the fair plaintiff showing her in bathing costumes at Three Mile Point, near Chautauque, were taken last summer by Nill, she says, and these will be shown at the trial.

Five of the pictures reveal Miss Wright in a bathing suit given to her by Nill and these, after he returned from week-end visits at the beachside cottage of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Ellen Wright, Nill had enlarged in dimensions of several feet to hang in his den, giving her copies.

To believe the defendants guilty of more serious charges, Mr. Carroll says, but did not have the facts to prove them beyond question to a trial jury. A conviction might have been secured but there was a larger chance of a failure to do so because of essential evidence expected which did not materialize.

It was thought best, therefore, to submit the proposition of piece of evidence to the judge, together with all the evidence in the hands of the defense for his judgment. The judge, he said, allowed the pictures, but quite another and harder to secure a conviction before a jury in a court trial.

EVIDENCE LACKING.
The federal officials had reason to believe the defendants guilty of more serious charges, Mr. Carroll says, but did not have the facts to prove them beyond question to a trial jury. It was thought best, therefore, to submit the proposition of piece of evidence to the judge, together with all the evidence in the hands of the defense for his judgment. The judge, he said, allowed the pictures, but quite another and harder to secure a conviction before a jury in a court trial.

DIVORCES WIFE WHO HUGGED AND KISSED FAMILY CHAUFFEUR

ROCKLAND MAN'S SPOUSE ELOPED WITH SERVANT

Plymouth, June 5.—Winthrop I. Perry of Rockland was granted a divorce from his wife, Mrs. Frances W. Perry, by Judge Stanley E. Qua in the Superior Court here. Perry also secured the custody of their two children.

Mrs. Mary McVane, formerly as maid in the Perry home, testified the cruel and abusive treatment that she had seen Mrs. Perry and the family chauffeur, Clarence S. Damon, meted out to each other, hugging and kissing each other at least every day for weeks before they eloped with the children in September last.

Perry would the story of his wife's elopement with the chauffeur and was corroborated by other witnesses. TO PAY $800 ANNUITY.

Mrs. Perry's counsel argued that she had been treated with cruelty and abuse, and that she was entitled to an annuity of $800 a year.

By agreement of counsel Perry obtained the custody of the two boys. He agreed to pay Mrs. Perry an annuity of $800.

Neither Mrs. Perry nor her counsel were in court. Once more appeared after court was adjourned and conferred with Perry's lawyers. Mrs. Perry is now said to be in New York.

They were married in New York July 2, 1906, and lived in Rockland until September, 1922, when they fled with chauffeur.

"On Saturday, September 16, I was served with an action for divorce."

Los Angeles, June 6.—Clara Phillips today, in Chapter V. of her narrative, tells of her arrest in Honduras and her experience while in custody. Love notes tossed through her cell window were a diversion. Prisoners with her were Jesse Carson, who, she says, kidnapped her from the Los Angeles county jail, and her sister, Etta Mae.

The minister then asked: "Which is Mrs. R. M. Young?" Carson pointed to, my sister. Carson had told her to take this name, as he had gotten her Guatemalan passport under the name of Young.

The minister then asked me: "What size shoe do you wear?" I told him "Two and a half." He asked me to take off my hat so that he could get a good profile view of me. He looked at my teeth and also examined my hair.

The minister said he had advice that Carson was wanted in the United States for arson. Carson denied this, but he was told to put on his hat and go to the penitentiary.

At first it was planned that all three of us should go to the penitentiary. Chief Bates, however, arranged for a room next to the office of the chief of police, where every looks the city jail at Tegucigalpa, and my sister and I were allowed to go there.

DID NOT ADMIT NAME.
A bed was sent up and also all of our meals were brought in from the Ambros Munder Hotel.

Of course, I did not admit that I was Clara Phillips.

The first night in the Tegucigalpa jail made me feel far worse than I felt the first night I was taken to the Los Angeles county jail.

The reason was Etta Mae, but, poor little soul, she was awfully brave and very consoling to me. We had books and bread. We also did some sewing.

We also looked out of the window from the little balcony, which could very well resemble the one in the play of "Romeo and Juliet." It was from here that so many natives made love to us, three kisses at a time, and offered to take us away to where we wanted something that he freedom if we wished.

From the very first we took a dislike to the Chief of Police. He was very only native enemy, but we were respected in kind and did everything we could to embarrass him would not do or go for us. We went to his house. That was why the chief could not force us to have pictures taken or measurements made.

ANNIED THE CHIEF.
At the very outset we received the most prominent and influential persons of Honduras as visitors. Every day they came in numbers. Our visitors were permitted to call, usually by appointment, in the afternoon. We went word out to the chief that we did not care to see any one in the morning.

I went to the window and there I saw a boy flashing a mirror to attract my attention. He threw a note up to me. The note was from a man stating:

"I am at your service. All you need to do is to call on me. It makes my heart ache to see you looking out that window wistfully. Let me help you."

The boy was acting as a messenger for a man of about thirty-three. He was a very nice native. The whole purpose of the note was to obtain information as to whether I would escape.

This man said, in one of the notes that he would flash a light at night in the distance. If I cared to go I was to leave my room dark. Everything would be arranged, he declared. He had fixed matters for me to pass the guards on duty.

If I did not care to go he instructed me to strike a match. I did this that night after I saw his signal. I did not care to go. The intervention of one of these notes resulted in the arrest of sixteen boys, who were later freed.

Another handsome looking man brought me some rope, which I hid in my trousers under his coat. He was one of two visitors who frequently called upon me.

PLAYED BALL TOO.
Several prominent officials also called upon me in the jail. They offered me my freedom in exchange for my sister. If I would be willing to establish a home there, I could have been liberated at any time, despite all the efforts to hold me.

The most rigorous man connected with the prison was the warden.

CENTRAL N. E. DOOMED, AS IT 'DOESN'T PAY'

Hartford, June 6.—According to an announcement by The Current, the New Haven Railroad has advanced a proposal for the abandonment of the Central New England Railroad.

C. L. Harbo, general manager of the New Haven R. R. and president of the Central New England Railroad, is authority for the statement that the road is being abandoned.

The old Connecticut Western Railroad, into which the Central New England Railroad was merged, was established in 1881.

The road was built by the Central New England, and now, as the bonds of the Hartford and Connecticut Western come due, July 1, 1923, it is announced that they cannot be paid and that it is contemplated by the New Haven Railroad management to abandon the road.

The road takes up its rails and sells off its real estate. It is estimated that the road costs $1,000,000 a year to run, and the business does not pay.

WIFE REBELLED WHEN MATE BROUGHT RIVAL INTO HER HOME

SAYS PAIR MADE LOVE OPENLY

Vermont Doctor Given Jail Term, Woman Companion Fined in Fitchburg

Fitchburg, June 6.—"I have had experience with his fickleness before," said Mrs. William C. Flanders of Burlington, Vt., bitterly commenting on the recent amours of her husband, which landed the fifty-nine-year-old grandfather and his thirty-one-year-old flame in District Court.

Dr. William C. Flanders was sentenced to five months in the House of Correction, and Mrs. Edith Lavelle, with whom he was arrested in a Fitchburg hotel, was fined $10 when they were found guilty of a statutory offense by Judge Gilchrist. Both appealed, and were released on $500 and $200 bail respectively.

BARRED FROM HOME.
"For more than twenty years we had lived happily together," the doctor's wife said. "I had had experience with his fickleness before, but it never took the form of bringing a woman into my own house, making love to her in my presence, and finally barring me from my home."

According to Mrs. Flanders, the difficulty began when she visited a married daughter in Newark. While there, she alleges, she received a letter from Flanders telling her not to return.

REPLACED BY RIVAL.
"I thought he was tired of me and merely wanted a divorce," she said. "I was ready to agree to a separation."

According to her story, she and her eighteen-year-old son were driven from the home, and Mrs. Lavelle, under guise of housekeeper, installed as mistress of the house. When the wife finally did return, Flanders insisted Mrs. Lavelle remain. Mrs. Flanders asserts.

Following the trial, which was attended by Mrs. Flanders, the three returned to Burlington. Mrs. Flanders did not accompany her husband and Mrs. Lavelle will occupy a separate residence with her relatives.

WOMAN STRUCK BY BAT DURING ROW
Mrs. Edith Prince, twenty-one years old, of 26, 33 Concord street, Roxbury, is at the City Hospital suffering from injuries about the head as a result of being struck with a baseball bat, it is alleged, by Mrs. Sarah Stewart of No. 19 Notre Dame street, Roxbury.

According to the police, Mrs. Prince was visiting at the house of Mrs. Stewart. They began to quarrel over some matter and Mrs. Stewart, it is alleged, seized a baseball bat which had been left in the corner of the room by her son, and hit Mrs. Prince over the head with it.

Haverhill, June 6.—Lionel Desmond, twenty-one years old, No. 21 Lexington street, Bradford, was killed and Ernest Sheridan, No. 25 Pleasant street, Bradford, suffered cuts and bruises when a motor truck they were driving hit the road and ran into a tree.

The truck, which belonged to a local plumbing company, had been used to pump a quantity of young men to the Fitchburg Hotel. The driver, Bernard and Sheridan slipped off with the truck when their companions were swimming in the pond.

MAN FREED BY MISTAKE GOES BACK TO JAIL

Patrick McKenney of Charleston, serving a three months' sentence at Deer Island on a charge of drunkenness, who was liberated by a clerical mistake Monday, voluntarily returned to finish his sentence.

Frank W. McKenney of East Boston, and Patrick McKenney of Charleston, both thirty-eight years old, and both serving three months' sentences on charges of drunkenness were confined at the House of Correction, Deer Island.

Patrick McKenney's sentence was up June 4, and Patrick McKenney's sentence had about one month and a half to run.

June 4 came around, and the officials looking over their records, released the wrong McKenney.

When the officials woke up Patrick was found after a search, and agreed to come back to serve the rest of his sentence.

Brockton, June 6.—Judge Lloyd E. Chamberlain of the Plymouth County Probate Court, in a decree entered, says a romance in the bud by refusing to sanction the marriage of Mary Mendosa of Weymouth, fourteen years old, to Dolphin Gomes, a thirty-seven-year-old storekeeper of the same town.

Judge Chamberlain advised the girl to wait until she is older and understands her own mind. He had learned that Gomes had requested permission of the Mendosa girl's parents to have her become a sort of housekeeper and clerk in his store. Her father instead proposed the marriage.

CHARGES SUITOR CAUSED LOVE SUIT

Pastor Is Murdered in Row Over Sermon

GIRL LAYS LOVE SUIT IN COURT

Miss Richardson Says Maine
Man Inspired Wife to Sue
Her for Alienation

A Boston girl accuses a married man in Maine of being so mad on her that he put his wife up to suing the girl for alienation of the husband's affections.

The girl in the case is Miss Grace M. Richardson, living in Randolph and employed in a Back Bay motor agency. The suit was brought by Mrs. Annie Ross of Charlestown, Me., on the ground that Miss Richardson stole the affection of Harry E. Ross, retired boy and gas dealer, of Charlestown, Me. "The suit is a lie," said Miss Richardson wrathfully.

WANTED TO WED HER.
Mr. Ross has been trying to get me to marry him for a long time. I avoided him, refused to listen to him.

"His wife will do anything he says. That is how the case came about. He is mad because I would have nothing to do with him and he has persuaded his wife to bring this suit. He and his wife are trying to vent their spite and get money at the same time."

Mrs. Ross charges her husband first met Miss Richardson when she was employed in the Ross household twenty years ago, that an infatuation sprang up between them and that this lasted until last January.

DENIES ALL CHARGES.
Mrs. Ross says she tried for years to break up the alleged friendship. She and her husband are about fifty-five. Miss Richardson is twenty years younger.

Miss Richardson, according to Mrs. Ross, induced Ross to file a divorce suit at Bangor last November. She also says that Ross provided homes for Miss Richardson in Bangor and Boston. On these points Miss Richardson said:
"I did meet the Rosses in their home, the first place where I worked. But, as for living in Bangor or Boston in any home provided by Ross, that is a lie."
"I had nothing to do with his filing of divorce suit. As a matter of fact, he never left his wife."

LYNN MAYOR ACTS AGAINST RENT HOGS

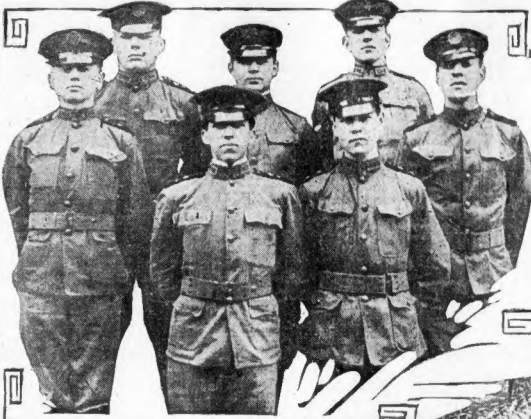

Mayor McPherson of Lynn sent a letter to the board of assessors advising them to take into account the income landlords have derived from increased rents as a possible method of checking the high rates levied on tenants.

The Mayor hopes, he wrote, that the landlords will not be so prone to raise rents when they realize that they will be assessed proportionately.

The beneficial results of military training in the public high schools of Boston will be clearly demonstrated Friday in the annual parade of the 8,000 boys who form the High School Cadet organization of this city.

Military instruction has done much to improve the habits attending Boston's high schools. This will be evident to the most casual observer of the three-mile parade which will reach the reviewing stand on Boston Common, off Tremont street, at 10:40 a. m. and will consume 45 minutes in passing.

LEARN DISCIPLINE.

Not only has military training resulted in better walking postures for the pupils, but they have also learned the real meaning of discipline.

REVIEW BY SCHOOL BOARD.

Members of the Boston School Board will review the parade from a tent on the Tremont street side of Boston Common. Others who will review it from the same spot include the following members of the advisory board—Colonel Edward L. Logan, General Charles H. Cole, General Thomas F. Foley, General John J. Sullivan, Colonel Frank C. Boile, General William H. Devine and Colonel John E. Gorman. In addition, Jeremiah E. Burke, superintendent of Boston public schools, and his assistant, William B. Snow, will be interested spectators from the same place.

According to Nathaniel J. Young, who has charge of physical instruction in Boston's schools, the High School boys are taking more interest in this year in military instruction than at any time during the sixty years it has been in force. This is due partly to the fact that the men who are training them as well as the members of the advisory board saw active service during the World War and are looked upon by the Cadets as heroes. This attitude on the part of the boys has produced some of the snappiest organizations ever seen in Boston.

is surprised at the cleverness of the youths. And when they hear the stirring music from the twelve bands and drum corps in line they will be High School of Commerce. Although English High was only 10th and 11th places in the recent inter-regimental drill the band did not tell the story adequately. There was only a small margin in the number of points between the second company and the last. This was due to the keenness of competition this season.

START THIS BIG, NEW STORY TODAY

Mona Fontaine, young, beautiful and the wife of a consulting engineer, has been told by her physician, Bob Osterhout, who is in love with her, that she has only a short time to live. She ignores his advice and continues to indulge in poker parties and cocktails with the modern, fast set which gathers at her charming house in Darrisdale. She asks Bob if many women confess to their doctors and then tells him about one of her affairs—that with Cary Scott. She suggests that the doctor marry one of her daughters. She sends for Bob and puts it up to her, but Bob refers her to Pat. NOW GO ON WITH THIS ENTICING STORY.

CHAPTER III.

"YOU'RE a liar!" came the hoarse voice from outside. There was a pause as for consideration. "A stinkin' liar," it concluded with conviction.

"Pat!" called her mother. "Oh, very well! But I bet I'm married before I'm Dee's age. And to a better man than Jimmy James. He's a chaser."

"We've got to send that child away to school," said Mona Fontaine in amused dismay as the door closed behind Osterhout. "She's growing up any old way, and she seems to know everything that's going on. . . . Dee, are you really going to marry Jimmy James?"

"I think so. Any objections?" "Well, Ada Clare, you know."

"He's through with her." "She's the kind that men don't get through with so readily. It's gone pretty far."

"It's gone the limit probably. Well, I never thought Jimmy was President of the Purty League, mother."

"Do you really care for him, Dee?" "Of course I do. I don't mean that he gives me an awful thrill. Nobody does."

"Perhaps the right man would." "Then I haven't seen him yet. Mother," she turned her cool regard upon Mona, "tell me about it."

"About what?" "The thrill. The real thrill. You know." Mona's color deepened. "You're a queer child, Dee. There are some things a woman has to find out for herself."

"Or get some man to teach her," supplied the girl thoughtfully. "The whole thing's mostly bluff, I think. Men are queer things. I could laugh my head off at Jimmy sometimes."

"That's a good safeguard." "Yes, but I don't need it. . . . Mother, aren't we going to pull a big party this Spring?"

"Of course. And we ought to do it pretty soon, too." "What makes you say that so queerly?"

"Nothing," answered Mona, hastily. "I was just thinking."

For though she was up and about again, she knew that she was weakening under the heart attacks which she suffered with silent fortitude, due partly to natural pride, partly to her belief that a complaining woman lost all charm for those about her, winning only the poor substitutes of pity instead of admiration. Upon De Osterhout she had imposed silence; she was determined that her household should know nothing so long as concealment was possible. In her way she was an unselfish woman.

She was quite aware that this would be the last of her parties in the house on the knoll.

Pat's voice floated upward in tones of lamentation. "Oh, damn it, Bobs! Go easy, can't you! That stuff's like fire."

"Patricia's fifteen," reflected the mother. "I'll enter her at the Sisterhood School next Fall."

The party was a Bingo. Before midnight that had been settled to the satisfaction of everyone. The music, good at the outset, soon became irresistible. (A drink all around every seven numbers was the Fontaine prescription for the musicians; expensive but worth it.) The punch was very special. Several of its masculine devotees had already faded, and one girl had been quietly spirited to an upper room.

Medbury Says

By John P. Medbury

A CITY in West Virginia has a prohibition domino playing on Sunday. The rattle of the dominoes probably keeps the police men awake.

THE law is a good one, but they ought to stop this terrible vice on week days too.

A MAN who'll play dominoes is really a criminal, and if the law lets him continue he might form a lot of other bad habits such as quills or marbles.

AND then before the authorities knew it, the gambling craze would have the deadly grip on him and he'd be playing tag with his own children.

THE world is getting more wicked every day and it won't be long before the good citizens of West Virginia will be playing jack straws and Lotto.

THE police made a raid there the other night and found one family with a deck of cards and the cops nabbed them, caught them dead to rights, playing Old Maid.

IT'S a good thing the officers broke in when they did because the family was just about to start a game of "Think Around the House."

ANY from linen on there's no telling what they might have done. They might have engaged in that terrible wicked game of "Hide and the Stock."

FROM now on, the cops in West Virginia will probably raid every home where there's a birth day party going on.

AND no little boy or girl in West Virginia will dare to have a birthday unless they are willing to pay for police protection.

THAT state is sure going to be the dogs, and the day is coming when the people there will disregard the law and will have a bottle of milk in their hip pockets.

IT'S getting so now that they won't drink an ice cream soda if they think anybody's watching them.

SOME of the confectionary parades even have look-out posts in front of the doors.

IT won't be long before the restaurants will have to have a prescription to get a milk shake.

THEY wouldn't tolerate tobacco in that state, either, if most of it wasn't grown there.

THE police won't allow any gambling machines in the state either. The only games of chance the people have there are nickel telephones.

AND the telephone company is rapidly taking all the chances out of those.

THIS West Virginia town wants to be clean, and if they keep on making laws like these it soon will be clean. There won't be a person in it.

BY STEVE FRY. IF YOU WANT TO VISIT SUMMER COTTAGES.

"We are not going to occupy our cottages this summer. We are going to rent it. My wife worked herself to death last summer entertaining company," said a man who has a summer cottage with a driving distance of the city in which he lives.

His plan is one that other cottagers would like to adopt.

The "drop in" practice of summer cottagers has taken much of the enjoyment out of an otherwise delightful season of rest and recreation.

Of course, your friends like to see you and entertain you, but summer time is the most chance owners is a time of rest, worry and weariness.

Even where help is employed the maid needs a rest, too.

Relaxation is in the air, but a handful of company and few conveniences turn an otherwise peaceful household into a jaded, overworked bunch.

A special invitation for a particular time is different, so go by all means if you can, but do not stay beyond the time set for your visit.

Give the cottage owners a chance for rest and pleasure.

A Matter of Necessity. Here is your friend Wilkins in favor of disarmament. He's a Jew, very Jewish. He wants to sell his shotgun so he can pay the rent.

The Work of Advertisers

They Build Industry, Civilization and Prosperity
Copyright, 1922, Map Company

The convention of Associated Advertising Clubs of the World at Atlantic City concentrates attention on the work done by advertising.

It is first of all CONSTRUCTIVE work. It actually BUILDS factories, stores, great organizations, great fortunes, while supplying work and wages to millions.

A hundred words occur to your mind, and every one means that advertising has created a name, and that the NAME represents a great business; that time and competition itself cannot injure unless the owner of the name allows it.

Advertising BUILDS, and what it builds it builds PERMANENTLY.

Take the two words, ATLANTIC CITY, and you know instantly that you have before you something that has been created first by intrinsic MERIT and second by intelligent ADVERTISING.

Any one of a half dozen automobile names means permanent prosperity, gigantic production, thousands of men well paid, tens or hundreds of thousands of customers well satisfied, and all that is built on MERIT and ADVERTISING.

What is the art of advertising? It is the art of getting a faithful idea from one brain into another—or into fifty million other brains.

In advertising, first you must create a thing the people WANT. That is the task of the manufacturer, the business man who understands production and quality.

After that you must MAKE the people KNOW that you have it. In addition to that you must, by description and convincing argument, MAKE the people WANT it.

Making the people know that the thing is to be had and making the people WANT that thing, such is the task of the advertiser.

Nature was the first great advertiser. And she did her best advertising in color, which would interest Mr. Kober, of the Hearst American Weekly.

The first great and effective color advertisement was the brightly colored flowers, the blossoms advertising the honey to be obtained from them, thus attracting the bees and other insects necessary to carry the pollen and produce more flowers. The next great colored advertisement was the rainbow, announcing "no more floods."

Learn from nature and the colors of the flowers and the plumage of the birds to make your advertising ATTRACTIVE. In advertising or in conversation it is just as easy to present your facts in a PLEASING way as in any other way.

This is the age of hurry. Men want to do all they can in the few years they have. They want to finish in ONE lifetime. Advertising is the TIME SAVER.

They say in England that a business built up slowly without advertising, from father to son, for a hundred years or more, is a very respectable, nice business. And it is. But you can see in the United States the same kind of business, a hundred times as big, built up in ten years by American energy, PLUS EFFICIENT ADVERTISING.

Business men should realize that advertising is a SPECIALTY.

They should realize that the advertising agent is to a business what the architect is to a building. The owner's money and the contractor's technical knowledge build the building. But it is a poor building if you don't have an architect mapping it out for you in advance and supervising it as it goes on.

So with business and the advertising agent, the specialist who is the architect of business.

For the young man advertising is a promising career. Advertising is in its infancy. There are plenty of chances ahead.

Advertising, intelligently understood, trains the mind in a hundred different directions. To be a thorough advertiser you must understand CLEAR, SIMPLE and CONVINCING writing.

A poor advertiser uses a hundred lines to make the reader think ONE line. The good advertiser uses TEN lines and makes the reader think ONE HUNDRED times.

What you write and put in the paper your employer pays for. What you make your reader THINK about your goods, after he has read it, you give to your employer for nothing. That is the thing for the advertising man to remember.

Advertising properly understood develops a good style. It compels the man who engages in advertising to study and understand the mind, the needs, the temperament, the shifting moods of the public.

Atlantic City will welcome the Advertising Clubs, who are to business many things, including THE SHORT CUT TO SUCCESS, the possibility of doing in one lifetime that which, WITHOUT ADVERTISING, would require a series of generations.

Painless Killing

It Could Be Accomplished
Copyright, 1922, Map Company

The Society for Preventing Cruelty to Animals offers prizes of $10,000 and $5,000 for humane methods of slaughtering animals.

Our slaughterhouse methods are much more brutal than the methods used in Europe, especially in Germany.

The great Clouser slaughterhouses allow the public to witness of slaughtering of oxen, knocked on the head, and seeing having their throats cut. But they do not allow the public to see the killing of sheep, of lambs—that is too painful.

Why not a great lethal chamber in which all animals would be rendered unconscious, then passed along on a moving platform to the butchers and on into eternity without feeling the knife or hammer?

No women should be ALLOWED to witness the slaughtering of animals, and none of them should WANT to witness it. It is bound to have a bad effect on their children.

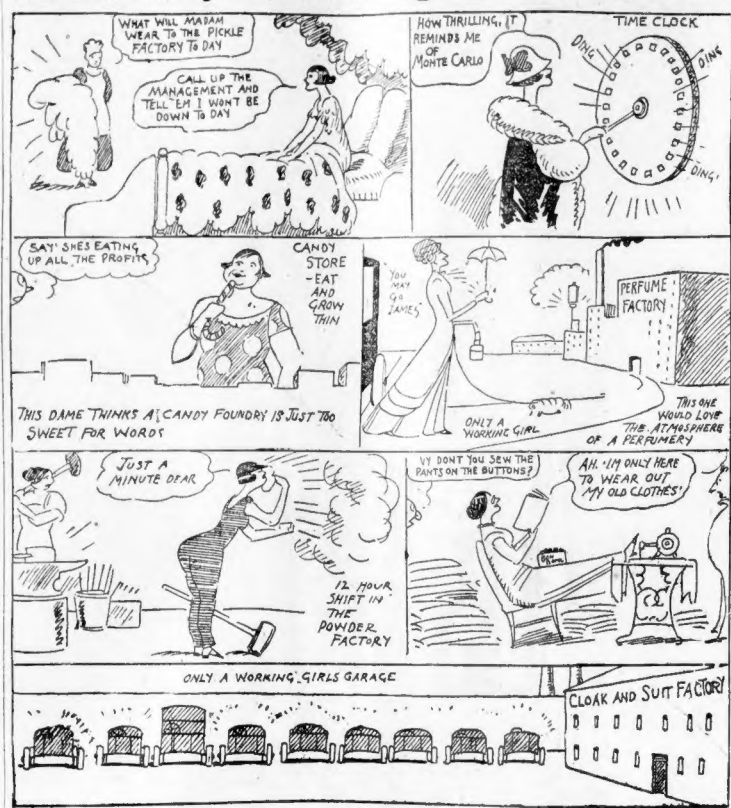

As for cruelty, what about the traps in which millions of animals suffer agony every year, waiting for the trapper? What about the millions of frogs impaled alive on fishhooks? King hearted people that approve scientific vivisection might consider unbroken whole-sale cruelty for a change.

PRESENT IS ONLY REAL TIME

By LUCY LOWELL

REMEMBER, my friend who reads, that the future never comes. Tomorrow always is just ahead—just out of your reach. Only this minute is yours—this minute that is passing now. One hour from now you—the essential part of you that lives and feels and plans and hopes and loves and knows discouragement and smiles again afterward—may be where? You know?

Visions look very, very bright sometimes. It's because they are visions. Created out of dreams and colored by hope, they always seem to wait where you'll be after a while. And if ever you do catch up with them, have you found them according to promise?

Young Wife With Three

Editor Helping Hand:
I am a young wife with three small children, a girl six, two boys, four and two. My little girl has been sick all winter with mastoiditis, and has just got the measles. My baby got them from her, and I am afraid the older boy will get them, too. I am having a terrible time. My husband hasn't worked for about two months. The children need clothes badly. My husband and I both need clothes also, but we can wait if the children can only get something to wear. The girl takes a 12 or 12½ shoe, and the boys size 10 and 9½.
MRS. K. W.

Articles For Girl

Editor Helping Hand:
I am enclosing a list of items which I feel some person could use. I should think a girl from seventeen to twenty-one or a small woman, size 24, could wear them. I think your work is really wonderful, and is one of the best things ever accomplished.
MRS. B. B.

Thank you, Mrs. B. B. for the order of M. L. G. of seventeen, whose father is dead, and who is in need of clothes.

Wash Suits

Editor Helping Hand:
I have a few wash suits, size 16, which I think I might pick up a few other things. I also have a suit, size 40. I also have a periwinkle blue suit and hat to match, a large green hat, a set straw urban, two pair of men's shoes, size 8½, a lot of men's soft collars, size 14, and shirts.

THE VOICE OF NEW ENGLAND

No Attention Paid to Anonymous Communications

Harding's Address
Editor Boston American:
President Harding, in his Memorial Day address at Arlington, struck a popular chord when he expressed the hope, if war came again to America, "that we will not also call to service the youth of the land, but will draft every resource, every activity, all of wealth and make a common cause of the nation's preservation."

Why should the sons of poor men be drafted while rich manufacturers can have their sons exempted, claiming they need their services during the war? The poor boy may come back maimed and for life, and when he sees the manufacturer's son safe and sound and the manufacturer a millionaire as the result of the war, can you blame him for feeling that somehow the nation is unjust even though it does not to him a distance by way of remuneration?

It would be consoling in war, there will not be so many ventures to plunge the nation into the mad maelstrom of conflict.

GEORGE MCINNIS.

He Wants Ford

Editor Boston American:
Henry Ford's election to the presidency on a business platform would benefit the nation. It would wipe out bootleggers, stop graft and put government on a business basis. That's needed. It would clean up the major parties, Republican and Democratic. They need it. It would kill the funds, drive them from power and give people a square deal. That's badly needed.
F. J. CUTLER.

DR. VAN DYKE QUOTES ST. PAUL'S ADVICE TO TIMOTHY

By Herbert Kaufman

INTERNATIONAL affairs stand in the wings of the news, while prohibition continues to hog the spot-light.

Wets and drys, in and out of office, slap the 'back and face of Governor Smith.

Washington prepares to rush new squads of enforcement officers to New York.

Foreign vessels are warned to bring no intoxicants beyond the three-mile limit after June 10th, and a conference is suggested by England to decide if the statutes of one country may properly challenge the maritime regulations of others.

New tempers rage in the demijohn as presidential candidates, Hamlet-wise, weigh the advantages of being or not being pro-Volstead.

And Dr. Henry Van Dyke, austere chiding William Jennings Bryan from the Brick Presbyterian Church pulpit, denies that the use of fermented grape juice is sinful and quotes St. Paul's advice to Timothy: "Use a little wine for thy stomach's sake."

Old John Barleycorn is decidedly alive and kicking.

Diplomacy Has No Such Rays

Premier Poincare speaks at the unveiling of a monument to Franco-American friendship and takes occasion to remark that the United States did not fulfill the co-operation pledges made by Woodrow Wilson.

Of course, he makes no mention of the unpaid loans made to France, nor do cable reports tell how fervently he expressed appreciation of American lives laid down in defense of his country or the billions of dollars devoted to rescue, rehabilitation and succor throughout devastated regions.

Here's a gentleman with a unique penchant for alienating old friends.

He doesn't like us, and makes no bones about it. But for that matter, the Stars and Stripes haven't had a cheer from Europe since we decided not to let the allies wrap any more of their hot chestnuts in our flag.

Demonstrations before the Academy of Sciences in Paris prove that sores caused by frost-bites, ulcers and burns, hitherto the most difficult to deal with, yield within twenty minutes to treatment by ultra-violet rays.

It's a pity that diplomacy doesn't apply some rays of sense to the festering wounds of the continent.

The laying on of hands a la Ruhr may serve revenge and politics, but not economic therapy.

McAdoo Guessed Right

Manhattan once had a saloon called the "Bucket of Blood." An appropriate name for the Balkans, which are again threatened with disruption through Bulgaria's demand for an outlet to the sea. Unless she gets an Aegean port, all peace bells therabouts are off.

The sword is a far more influential force than the word in that hectic region. A high local birth rate seems to be the only thing that has prevented the utter depopulation of the buffer States. Trouble dearly loves shifting frontiers.

The Greek drachma, fluctuatingly confident of settled differences in the neighborhood, rises so suddenly that every bank in Athens but one is caught with too much foreign currency, and numbers of big financial institutions totter to the walls.

Ton of the richest men in Greece are reputed penniless.

William G. McAdoo, while Secretary of the Treasury, confessed to the writer that nobody then seemed to understand anything about exchange. Subsequent events have quite verified the shrewdness of his opinion. It's a wise government that knows the day-to-day value of its own money.

Another "Mysterious" Tomb Found

Countess Carnarvon manifestly hasn't a superstition's bone in her body. She concludes to retain possession of Tutankhamen's relics. The lady shows more common sense than good taste. Such collections belong to museums. Tomb-breaking is inexcusable except for the benefit of research and education.

A Minneapolis contractor exhumes the body of a Sioux chief and immediately after finds his arm poisoned and blistered. Spiritualists will at once wave hands and remind us of Lord Carnarvon's sudden demise, Conan Doyle will issue more "I told you so's," and physicians investigating the infection will eventually trace it to a poisoned arrow or the scratch of a rusty spear head.

The dead do curse the living, but their evil spells are carried in transmitted bad blood.

Never a Forehanded People

Dr. Frances Carter Wood, searching for cancer causes, under the auspices of the National Cancer Institute, one fell inheritance is about to end its reign of terror.

Improved diagnosis, prompt surgical action and radium emanations promise ultimate relief from the ghastliest of living ills.

A Statistical results were not to be immediately apparent because post-mortem examinations have developed the amazing information that 20 per cent. more people regularly die from malignant internal growths than census figures attest.

The Agricultural Department, fighting other malignant growths and their carriers, prepares to launch aerial attacks upon leaf-eating insects and invents a machine to sterilize cotton seeds in the process of delivery from the gin.

The pink worm has crossed the continent and has already devoured vast areas of Arizona and New Mexico plantations. Man wouldn't stand a chance on this earth if his crawlers weren't held in check. Protect the birds—they're worth their weight in gold.

Anti-stillars by billions appear in Westchester County, New York. Alarmed authorities summon the entire community to defend the woods. Boy Scouts rush to the rescue and devote their afternoons to burning nests.

If unimproved property hadn't been neglected in previous seasons there'd be no considerable menace to deal with now.

A little spraying every day alone can keep the pests away. Americans always wait until the ninth stitch breaks—we've never been a forehanded people.
